Why to Go Green, Paperless?

Going paperless by utilizing electronic document management systems helps cut down on deforestation and pollution, leaving more trees to do the dirty work of absorbing carbon dioxide (and slowing down global climate change).

There are plenty of reasons why it's a good idea to go paperless in the office—ranging from environmental to budgetary. Here are few benefits keep in mind the next time you make the presentation to your boss.

Insights

In their 2016 State of the Cloud Survey, Right Scale notes that Cloud adoption is up to nearly 95%. Why has using the cloud become such a normal part of all of our lives? The simple response is that it's better than the alternative.

Technology progresses over time and society begins to adopt it. But the cloud in particular has so many benefits over local storage that it seems worthwhile to list them out.
